OPEN
MOBILITY
FOUNDATION

The Open Mobility Foundation is a trusted nonprofit organization that brings together cities, technology companies, and the public to develop open-source standards that help manage mobility and public space for the public good.

We are governed by public agency leaders from around that world who are united in finding digital solutions to transportation challenges. Joined by experts, advocates, and other stakeholders, the OMF's leaders work collaboratively — incorporating viewpoints and expertise from key groups and communities — to develop open-source urban mobility tools.

WHY JOIN

The Open Mobility Foundation prepares cities for the digital infrastructure transformation road ahead. The data specifications we steward align mobility data between cities and mobility tech companies and provide a single reporting standard, eliminating the need for redundant data formatting and processing. This can help cities better manage the public realm and advance a wide range of policy goals from the environment and the local economy to safety and livability.

BUILD RELATIONSHIPS

Participate in our virtual and in-person programming that provide opportunities to promote and socialize civic challenges to potential private sector partners.

TECHNICAL SUPPORT

Access guides, best practices and peer cities insights to help design systems that provide insight and analysis on how the public realm is being navigated, and the tools to improve that experience for all.

ADVANCE GOALS

Data gathered through MDS and CDS can empower cities through informed decision-making, proactive management, and compliance, ultimately aligning their transportation systems with broader policy goals.

“ We see collaboration as a critical way to broaden our horizons and innovate our offerings for new and existing customers.
-Matt Terry, AppyWay
